

Arnica Montana

The first go-to remedy for any pain, swelling or bruising – can be give every 10 minutes in the beginning, then every 30 minutes – every hour etc.

Hamamelis & Phosphorus

Hemorrhaging

Loss of blood, both external and internal

When Annie's spleen ruptured I gave her one of these before heading to the emerg clinic and by the time I got there her gums were pink again. They commented that she "looked fine".

It lasted for about an hour, enough time to get to the vet and see what can be done.

Ledum

Puncture wounds, swelling

Aconitum

Shock

Sudden Trauma

One dose and then another 10 minutes later.

I used this for Annie after Toad ripped a big hole in the side of her neck during a fight, she was shaking and panting badly.

5 minutes after the first dose there was a noticeable difference and after the second dose she had stopped shaking and was laying quietly.

Lyssinum

Rabies nosode, I have this around just in case because my dogs are vaccine-free.

Can also be used after the rabies vaccine is given to counter-act side effects.

Silicea

Pushes out foreign materials – slivers and porkie quills!!

Note: may also push out a microchip, it usually takes prolonged doses to do this though.

Carbo Veg

The need for oxygen.

I used this for a pup once and it worked right away to perk him up and he went right to nursing!

Ruta Graveolens

Bruises to the bone

Bone fractures

Use if pain persists after using Arnica

Pulsatilla

Lots of uses, but I use it for a “hormonal” female – one coming into season and being bitchy, or going through a pseudopregnancy, etc.

Calendula

Excellent remedy for healing cuts, sores, open wounds, even ones that have gone “bad”. Eliminates the need for stitches in a lot of cases, heals with little scarring.

Before Treatment

2 Hrs After Oral Dose Of Calendula

Tinctures - Calendula (healing) and St. John's Wort (infections) -

Equal parts are mixed with water – soak a cloth and use as a compress, or put in a spray bottle and spray on wound.

These are tinctures not homeopathic pellet remedies as above.

HOW TO USE A HOMEOPATHIC REMEDY

The most common remedies are usually available from a health food store, they are small white pellets and can be given either as a

Dry Dose – a human would hold the pellets under the tongue to let them dissolve but with a dog you need to crush the pellets on a spoon and flip the spoon up-side-down and hold it on the tongue for as long as possible or if the dog is immobile the pellets can just be placed between the cheek and gums.

Wet Dose – pellets are dissolved in $\frac{1}{4}$ cup of clean water (free from chlorine or fluoride – etc.) and a tablespoon is given to the dog or even easier use a syringe. I use a small mason jar for this, put the lid on and it can be kept in the fridge for a couple of days of use. The water must be stirred/shaken before each use.

Wet doses seem to be easiest for use on a dog but in an emerg - out hunting - the dry pellets of course are make more sense.

Ideally remedies should be given 15 minutes away from food and water.

Don't touch the pellets with your hand (oil from your skin is not helpful for them)
